Car-Lite Long Beach challenges LB to a Week Without Driving

Richard H. Grant | Signal Tribune

While Broadway is closed, bikes take over the streets and the bike lanes during the annual Beach Streets event on May 20, 2023. Car-Lite Long Beach is encouraging the community to go car-free during the Week Without Driving challenge, taking place from Sept. 30 to Oct. 7.

Managing Editor

Long Beach's alternative transportation advocacy group, Car-Lite Long Beach, is participating in the national Week Without Driving challenge, and inviting others to join the journey.

From Monday, Sept. 30 to Monday, Oct. 7, members of Car-Lite Long Beach will ditch their cars for bikes, buses, scooters and the occasional carpool request. The goal is to "experience the world through the lens of non-drivers," and all the challenges and small wonders that come with it.

Week Without Driving began in Washington in 2021, from a disability rights group challenging people to go through daily life without being able to drive. In 2023, the movement became national.

Roughly 30% of adult Americans don't drive, according to automotive marketing agency Hedges & Company. This can be due to age, health reasons, financial reasons or by personal preference. Car-Lite Long Beach, made up of dozens of Long Beach residents, has been advocating for safer streets for pedestrians and bikers as well as increased alternative transportation.

"It's about having people have that moment of like 'It's not impossible to not have a car,'" said Erin Hoops, an organizer with Car-Lite Long Beach. "In my ideal world, I think it's people realizing that you just really need to plan ahead

Furthering the process brought forth by the student-led Green Schools Operations Energy Policy, which aims to decrease the Long Beach Unified School District's water and energy consumption and dependence on fossil fuels, LBUSD has approved a districtwide sustainability plan with three priority-based strategies to meet its clean energy goals by 2045.

Briana Mendez-Padilla

Education Reporter

The Long Beach Unified School District (LBUSD) unanimously approved a districtwide sustainability plan at its Sept. 18 board meeting to ensure its clean energy goals are met by 2045.

The plan is a follow-up to the district's Green Schools Operations Energy Policy 3510.1, a student-led green energy policy passed in July 2022 to transition LBUSD off of fossil fuels and decrease water and energy consumption.

Courtesy of Keira Lam

Students with the Long Beach Green Schools Campaign hold protest posters outside of a Jan. 18, 2022 Long Beach Unified School District (LBUSD) Board of Education meeting.

"We know there was quite a bit of student interest and community interest with respect to our green schools practices. The board adopted a new energy policy, we have our Vision 2035 plan that calls out sustainability, our facility master plan does so as well. So this really kind of brings it all to a head," said David Miranda, executive director of facilities development and planning.

The district-wide sustainability plan "consolidates existing initiatives and prioritizes options for climate mitigation strategies, bridging the gap between the engineering solutions, organizational culture, and education" according to the district's report.

The plan was created with input from the Climate and Sustainability Task Force, school leaders, parents, industry experts and the City.

As of December 2023, the district has installed 7,400 kilowatts of solar photovoltaics — solar cells that turn sunlight into electricity — and is acquiring an additional 2,900 kilowatts across 16 more sites, according to the plan report.

Specific Strategies

The plan will implement two types of strategies: one focusing on greenhouse gas reduction and the other on programmatic solutions.

The greenhouse gas emission reduction strategies are divided into three categories based on priority:

- Priority 1 strategies have financial savings which could then be used to fund additional Priority 2 and 3 strategies.

- Priority 2 strategies provide emission reductions without a significant financial incentive.

- Priority 3 strategies are longer-term conservation goals and look toward capital improvement.

Priority 1 strategies include installing additional solar cells at 56 district sites and replacing LED lighting at 11 sites. Priority 2 strategies include Air Conditioning, kitchen and pool heater electrification and vehicle fleet decarbonization. As part of Priority 3 strategies, the district will be replacing turf grass with artificial turf that may reduce water consumption by as much as 58,600,000 gallons of water per year.

Long Beach has partnered with a state organization to launch a Neighbor-to-Neighbor program, focusing on creating community networks in the West and Central areas of the city.

Neighbor-to-Neighbor is led by California Volunteers, Office of the Governor and aims to encourage civic action and volunteering in underserved communities across the state. Long Beach's Office of Climate Action and Sustainability will receive a $500,000 state grant to create the program.

The program is meant to create a network of volunteers and community organizations to identify and address challenges specific to each neighborhood. Additional goals are to mitigate community isolation, increase volunteering and improve social connectedness in neighborhoods.

"We are committed to activating our diverse neighborhoods and empowering our residents — especially local youth — to get involved and make a difference," said Mayor Rex Richardson in a public statement. "We are proud to partner with California Volunteers and support their mission to build more connected, supportive and resilient neighborhoods and our Neighbor-to-Neighbor program will do just that right here in Long Beach."

The program's focus is to expand California's existing volunteer infrastructure and bolster the statewide Neighbor-to-Neighbor network to recruit, train, equip and organize neighbors to address community needs. Long Beach is one of nine partner agencies selected through a statewide competitive process.

Through the program, the City will host networking and community engagement events, including movies in the park and block parties, and climate action activities such as tree plantings and community science events. Additionally, the City will facilitate neighborhood surveys and workshops to set priorities and plan projects within the program's scope.

"Our Neighbor-to-Neighbor partnership with the City of Long Beach will bring community members together to improve their neighborhoods, build connections and be better prepared for disasters," said California Chief Service Officer Josh Fryday in a public statement. "When neighbors are connected, communities thrive."

More details on the Neighbor-to-Neighbor program will be posted at lbcity.info/n2n.

Signal Hill Park playground will get new rubberized surface

Kristen Farrah Naeem

Staff Writer

Signal Hill City Council approved a contract of nearly $133,000 with a Corona-based company on Tuesday to replace the worn-out playground surface at Signal Hill Park.

After years of wear and tear, the playground surface has deteriorated. The current rubberized surface at the park was installed in 2015, and the average lifespan of these types of surfaces is seven to ten years.

The City selected SpectraTurf to demolish the old surface and install a new one. SpectraTurf specializes in manufacturing and installing rubber surfaces.

According to City staff, this project is needed to ensure the playground remains in good condition until the park undergoes a more extensive renovation. Signal Hill's Civic Center Master Plan will revamp the park with a new playground and sports courts.

The contract with SpectraTurf is for $132,625, and an additional $13,262 has been set aside in case of unforeseen costs.

The City originally allocated $120,000 for this project, but the full cost is now estimated at nearly $146,000. The city council amended the City's annual budget to include the funding increase for the new playground surface.

According to Public Works Director Thomas Bekele, the new rubberized playground surface will be black and cobalt blue.

Emma DiMaggio | Signal Tribune

Signal Hill Park will receive a new rubberized surface via SpectraTurf.

The project is set to begin in October, with installation of the new playground surface estimated to last two weeks, and is expected to be completed in November.

Letter-writers will be identified by their professional titles or affiliations when, and only when, the editorial staff deems it relevant and/or to provide context to the letter. We do not run letters to the editor submitted by individuals who have declared their candidacies for public office in upcoming races. This policy was put in place because, to be fair, if we publish one, we would have to publish all letters submitted by all candidates. This year marks the first time Car-Lite Long Beach is participating in the national Week Without Driving. Last year, 142 local organizations across 41 states participated in the week-long challenge, according to its website.

Car-Lite Long Beach reached out to local politicians and leaders to ask if they would like to participate and have not received any commitments yet, Hoops said. Week Without Driving reported on its website that over 300 politicians participated last year, helping to bring awareness to their communities.

“Elected officials can post on their social medias and share their experience and at the end of the week, share if it was how they expected or not,” Hoops said. “Politicians who have done it, a lot of them were surprised. The lessons they learned were not the lessons they thought they were going to learn.”

public transit rides throughout the week.

The experience will widely vary depending on what part of the city someone lives in, due to access to public transportation, the amount of green space in the area and the number and types of trees providing shade to someone as they travel. Politicians participating in this challenge are meant to face this reality as well.

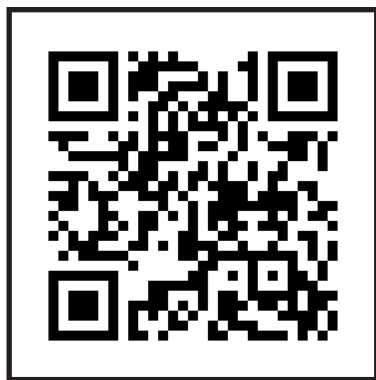

Hoops said youth are one of the groups that often get overlooked when talking about the need for alternative transportation and investment in safe walking streets.

“The independence of getting around your city is something a lot of young people are missing out on and I think that’s a key part of development and a way for all of us to build empathy and give our young people a way to learn,” Hoops said.

Residents can take the pledge to participate in the Week Without Driving by signing up online as an individual, organization, transportation professional or elected official. Car-Lite Long Beach will be posting their experiences throughout the week, as they opt in for alternative modes of transportation. Residents can follow their journeys on Instagram @carlitelb.

SPOOKY SHORT STORIES

for our upcoming 'Spooky Issue'

In celebration of the spooky season, the Signal Tribune invites readers to submit their best scary stories for a chance to be part of our upcoming Halloween issue.

Whether you’re a budding writer or a seasoned storyteller, this is your chance to share your spine-chilling tale. Stories must be family-friendly, with no derogatory language or images, and can be up to 800 words. Participants are encouraged to include an original image to accompany their story, but if needed, the Signal Tribune will select one for you.

There are two categories: Youth (16 and under) and Adults. One winner from each category will be chosen and their stories will be posted online, on our social media channels, and in our Halloween issue. Please include your name, age and contact information with all submissions. Please do not submit more than two stories.

Submit your original spooky stories to newspaper@signal-tribune.com with the subject line “SPOOKY STORIES” by Wednesday, Oct. 4 at 11:59 p.m. for a chance to be included in our second annual spooky issue.

An employee at ReJoule inspects extra large lithium-ion battery packs that will be tested in the high voltage area of their lab on Oct. 4, 2023.

EPA Response: On Sept. 4, Garcia responded to the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) proposal to add a former Exide Technologies facility in Vernon, California to the Superfund National Priorities List, which includes sites that have been prioritized for clean up by the federal government. Exide's battery recycling plant left behind dangerous pollutants in the area. The EPA will open a 60-day public comment period, with a final decision expected in Spring 2025. If the Vernon site is added, the EPA will create a remediation plan addressing contamination at the site.

"The EPA's announcement is a critical step forward to a full Superfund Designation and a full federal cleanup of the Exide site. I will be working tirelessly to make sure the EPA pursues the strongest possible lead cleanup and remediation effort, to the highest possible standard. The federal government must bring justice to a community which has been overlooked time after time," Garcia said in a public statement.

Bill Vetoed: Governor Gavin Newsom vetoed The Climate Resilient Schools Act, authored by Gonzalez, on Sept. 22. A previous version of the bill was also vetoed by Newsom last year.

The bill would have developed a long-term plan to protect California schools from the impacts of climate change while lowering their greenhouse gas emissions.

"With the increasing frequency of climate emergencies, we need to be well-prepared to protect the safety of students, teachers, and communities when they are most at risk," Gonzalez said in a public statement. "We need a comprehensive plan to address climate-related health and safety threats to California students, and can no longer rely on a disjointed and piecemeal approach to fortifying our thousands of school facilities. I'm incredibly disappointed that the Climate Resilient Schools Act was vetoed for the second year in a row. The longer we wait, the harder and more expensive it will be to make the changes we need to see real impact."

Presidential Debate Statement: "The United States of America DESERVES Kamala Harris as our next President," Gonzalez posted on X on Sept. 10, the same day as the presidential debate between Harris and Trump.

Pacific Avenue Improvements: Barragán successfully requested that the U.S. Department of Transportation provide funding for the City of Long Beach to update Pacific Avenue. The City will receive $25 million for the project through the Department of Transportation's Safe Streets and Roads for All (SS4A) grant program. Improvements to the corridor will include protected bike lanes, pedestrian crossings and more, according to a statement by Barragán's office.

"This critical infrastructure project will be a great addition for the City of Long Beach and the improved health and safety of its residents," Barragán said in a public statement. "This federal funding will modernize a major corridor and improve connectivity to schools, parks, public transit stations, and other key destinations between the Wrigley neighborhood and Downtown Long Beach. I was proud to advocate for this funding earlier this year to create safer streets for our communities in Long Beach."

PANS/PANDAS: On Sept. 14, Lowenthal joined members of the California Coalition for PANS/PANDAS Advocacy on Granada Beach in Long Beach, for an event bringing awareness to Pediatric Autoimmune Neuropsychiatric Disorder Associated with Streptococcal Infections (PANDAS) and Pediatric Acute-onset Neuropsychiatric Syndrome (PANS). These illnesses cause sudden onset symptoms similar to obsessive compulsive disorder in children after an infection, such as strep throat.

Families of children with PANS/PANDAS have experienced difficulty getting their insurance providers to cover diagnosis and treatment for their children. Lowenthal authored Assembly Bill 2105, which aims to secure insurance coverage and expedite care for those suffering from PANS/PANDAS. The bill has passed through both houses of the state legislature, was sent to the governor's office on Sept. 11, and is awaiting the governor's final decision.

Candidate Forum: Lowenthal joined other local politicians for a forum at the Alpert Jewish Community Center on Sept. 18, where he answered questions alongside Josh Rodriguez, the Republican candidate running for Lowenthal's seat in the upcoming November election.

Out with the old, in with the new: LB organic waste collection program will begin in October

Staff Report

Signal Tribune

This October, Long Beach Public Works will start rolling out its Residential Organics Collection Program, with the aim to reduce waste and improve recycling throughout the city.

This program will be in line with Senate Bill 1383, and its goal to have a 75% reduction in organic material from landfills and subsequently lower methane emissions from landfills across California.

“By launching the organics collection program, our City is taking a significant step towards a greener future and aligning with the state’s broader efforts to combat climate change,” said Mayor Rex Richardson in a public statement. “We encourage everyone to participate, stay informed, and help make Long Beach a leading example of environmental stewardship.”

Over the years, Long Beach has worked towards fully implementing SB 1383, the Short-Lived Climate Pollutants Organic Waste Methane Emissions Reduction bill.

Three years ago, the City began diverting organic material from City-serviced commercial accounts through its Commercial Food Scraps Collection Pilot Program, which concluded last year. Next month, Long Beach will launch phase one of the residential organics program, with the goal of full implementation by the end of 2025.

“Launching a new program of this scale is a significant undertaking, and our focus is on keeping the community well-informed before their service begins,” said Eric Lopez, Public Works Director, in a public statement. “We’re committed to continuous education about what belongs in each cart — whether it’s trash, recycling, or organics — so that residents can smoothly transition to this new state-mandated initiative.”

During the week of Oct. 14, residents living within the City’s phase one service areas will receive a new green cart for the collection of yard trimmings and food scraps. The current purple recycling carts will be taken, recycled and replaced by new blue carts.

This cart switch allows the City to comply with the SB 1383 requirement for standardized cart colors statewide. Until the exchange is made, phase one residents are advised to hold onto their existing carts.

Richard H. Grant | Signal Tribune

As part of the Residential Organics Collections Program, the existing purple recycling carts will be replaced by new blue carts.

Around 8,000 single family and multifamily homes will be visited during phase one. Residents can check out an interactive map to see if they’re located in any of the phase one locations.

Current service date, collection locations and volume of yard trimmings generated were among the factors considered for chosen areas. Various operational scenarios will also be explored to determine their place in future phases of the program.

To inform residents of the program, the City is launching a public outreach campaign. First-phase residents will receive direct mailers with program details printed in English and Spanish. Khmer and Tagalog mailers can also be requested or completed online.

Long Beach will also conduct door-to-door visits and launch the “neighborhood champion” initiative, encouraging residents to spread the word and gather the most effective communication methods for program participation.

To diminish potential contamination, City staff will sample carts on a routine basis to test for contamination and disperse educational materials to ensure proper cart use.

The City received 10,702 responses on an eight-week community survey in 2022 to receive public feedback on the food scraps and yard trimming collection program. Using this information, outreach materials were created and the program website was updated to feature the current program.

Pet of the week: Polaris

Polaris is a Great Pyrenees mix who’s only a year old. He’s a gorgeous boy who’s loving and playful! His toys are his joys, and walks are his favorite times. He’s always eager to get started—he pulls a little at first—and he loves to stop and lie down in the grass next to his human walking buddy just for some “us time”! “Someone is going to really get a gem!” said his volunteer buddy Debra. Speed the process to adopt or foster Polaris or any of our other pets by emailing PetAdopt@longbeach.gov or petfoster@longbeach.gov. You can also call (562) 570-4925. Our shelter hours are Wednesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 7700 E. GREEN ECONOMY

Port of Long Beach and global oceanic companies collaborate on environmental memorandum

Staff Report

Signal Tribune

A group of international maritime entities have announced a Green Framework Partnership to work together on decarbonizing ocean trade and ensuring a green maritime economy around the Pacific Rim.

Richard H. Grant | Signal Tribune

The Port of Long Beach’s new environmental memorandum is expected to kickstart future green partnerships.

Representatives from the Port of Long Beach, Shenzhen Port Group, Hutchison Ports YANTIAN, South Coast Air Quality Management District (AQMD) and the North American Representative Office of Shenzhen met in Shenzhen, China on Sunday to sign the memorandum.

The agreement creates a foundation for future clean technology collaborations, programs and exchanges to promote the development of sustainable infrastructure industry-wide. It also prioritizes economic development that incorporates sustainability and public health.

“One of the most important parts of strategic partnerships like this is the ability to target shipborne emissions, a source we have little power to regulate as a local port authority,” said Port of Long Beach CEO Mario Cordero in a public statement. “We see the potential for this agreement to make fleets cleaner sooner. The technologies and practices we develop through this agreement also have the potential to have a positive impact on the environment and economies far beyond our two ports and cities.”

Long Beach Airport increases efforts to lower carbon emissions

Staff Report

Signal Tribune

Long Beach Airport (LGB) has received a $680,851 grant from the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) to purchase six electric vehicles (EV) and two solar tree vehicle chargers. This is part of the FAA’s Zero Emissions Vehicle and Infrastructure Pilot Program, and will be paired with $72,803 in airport revenue.

This investment was coordinated by Long Beach Airport in partnership with the City’s Fleet Services Bureau, which provided cost estimates for the new equipment.

“Long Beach Airport continues to find unique ways to integrate zero-emission technology into its operations, underscoring both LGB’s and the City’s commitment to sustainability and resilience,” said Mayor Rex Richardson in a public statement. “This generous funding from the FAA is not just an investment for the present—it’s ensuring a greener tomorrow.”

This latest project is part of an ongoing effort to reduce emissions created by operational equipment on the airfield. In 2020, the Airport installed electric chargers for airline ground support equipment (GSE), resulting in the transition of two-thirds of the GSE fleet from diesel vehicles to zero emissions electric equipment.

The purchases also align with the Long Beach Climate Action Plan to reduce greenhouse gas emissions with the ultimate goal of achieving net zero emissions by 2045. The project is in line with Airport Carbon Accreditation (ACA) program efforts to reduce emissions from 2016 levels, on a per passenger basis, by 20% in 2025 and 40% in 2030, with a goal for the Airport to eventually become a carbon-neutral facility.

LGB’s accreditation, a commitment renewed biannually since it was first awarded in 2021, was renewed again earlier this month.

“Long Beach Airport is deeply committed to reducing our carbon footprint and enhancing the sustainability of our operations,” said Airport Director Cynthia Guidry in a public statement. “We are grateful for this FAA support to help us take another important step in our journey toward net-zero emissions.”
