Greenly Art Space will unveil personal transformation in director's solo exhibition

For the first time under Greenly's roof, Curator and Director Kimberly Hocking will showcase decades of her own work.

Samantha Diaz
Managing Editor

Greenly Art Space Director and Curator Kimberly Hocking has spent the last 14 years making the Signal Hill nonprofit gallery a hub for both local and international artists. Hocking has often traveled across the globe to meet with her featured artists in order to put together a meticulously planned show. However, in Greenly's upcoming exhibition "Hope and Bone: An Apothecary of Small Acts," she needed to explore inward.

The show's opening this Saturday will mark the first time Hocking has used the space to host a solo exhibition of her own work, spanning 37 years of artistic and personal growth.

A photograph Hocking took of her younger brother who has since passed away, marks the beginning of her artistic journey as the first time she experimented with film photography at 17 years old. An ongoing year-long project capturing her current path of transformation shows two photos of Hocking taken daily—one at the beginning of the day and one at the end—which will be added throughout the show's duration.

CITY COUNCIL

Signal Hill considers impounding carts of noncompliant street vendors

The ordinance will be voted on by Signal Hill City Council on Aug. 27. Noncompliant street vendors include those operating without a permit and insurance, or those deemed to be causing a safety hazard.

Kristen Farrah Naeem

Staff Writer

An ordinance was introduced to the Signal Hill City Council on Tuesday that would allow city officials to impound the carts, equipment and merchandise of street vendors who aren't in compliance with City codes.

Signal Hill's Sidewalk Vending Program requires street vendors to obtain a permit from the City, be insured and limit their operations in areas such as government facilities, public parks, houses of worship and schools.

Since street vending was decriminalized in California in 2019, Signal Hill is not allowed to subject street vendors to criminal penalties. The City has relied on issuing citations to noncompliant and unlicensed street vendors since then.

If this ordinance were to pass, city officials will be able to impound carts, food, cooking equipment, utensils, goods, or merchandise that are deemed to pose "an imminent environmental, health, or safety hazard."

City staff said there have been instances of street vendors blocking sidewalks, operating without licenses, having unsanitary conditions and leaving trash and food waste on streets and sidewalks.

City officials designated to impound vending equipment under the proposed ordinance would include code enforcement officers, Public Works inspectors, police officers, firefighters and fire prevention specialists or examiners.

Street vendors will be able to appeal city officials' decision to impound their carts and equipment in order to potentially get their possessions back. However, impounded food will be thrown away.

Street vendors will be required to pay a fee to appeal an impoundment, but the fee may be refunded if the street vendor is found to be in the right. The ordinance makes no mention of reimbursement for food thrown away if a vendor successfully appeals an impoundment.

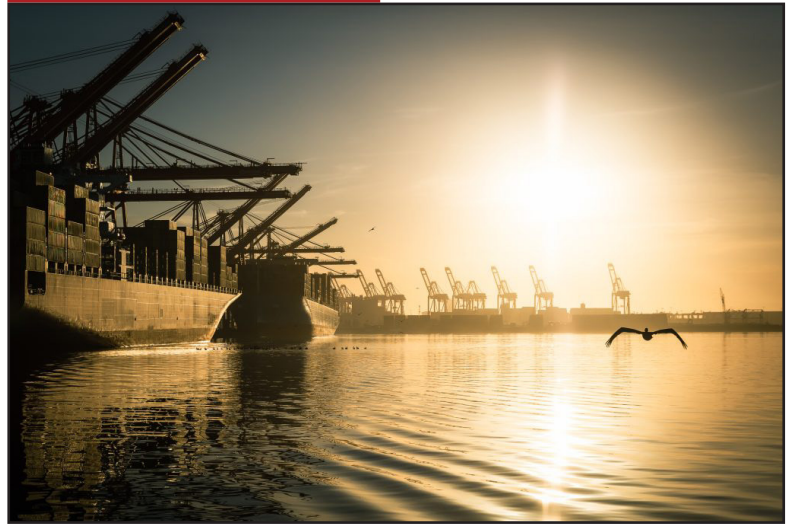

The ordinance was introduced for the first time on Tuesday, will be voted on by Signal Hill City Council on Aug. 27, and, if passed, would go into effect on Sept. 27.

This ordinance differs from the City of Long Beach's sidewalk vending ordinance which went into effect earlier this year. Long Beach opted to focus on educating street vendors on licensing requirements for months after the new ordinance came into effect, instead of issuing citations and impounding property.

Currently, it is unclear when Long Beach will begin impounding carts from unlicensed street vendors.

Bonnie Lowenthal and Frank Colonna will serve as president and vice president of the Long Beach Board of Harbor Commissioners for the 2024-25 fiscal year, officials announced Tuesday.

The five-member board voted Monday to elect Lowenthal and Colonna to their respective roles, as well as member Steven Neal to serve as secretary. Outgoing commission president Bobby Olvera Jr. will hand over the gavel to Lowenthal at the board's meeting on Aug. 5.

"It is an honor to be elected and serve as president of the Long Beach Harbor Commission," Lowenthal said in a public statement. "I look forward to working with my fellow commissioners as we build a port to better serve the residents of Southern California in the decades to come and continue to pursue our trailblazing environmental programs, innovative capital improvements and our ongoing investment in workforce development."

Lowenthal previously served as president of the board from 2019-

20, and currently serves as the vice president. She has spent decades in government — as a Long Beach Unified School District Board member, a Long Beach City Council member, vice mayor and a state Assembly member.

Her son, Josh Lowenthal, is a member of the California State Assembly. Her husband Alan Lowenthal is a former member of the U.S. House of Representatives.

She has also worked as a licensed family counselor and mental health consultant.

Each July, commissioners select a president and two board officers to serve one-year terms.

Under the City Charter, the board sets policy for the Port of Long Beach and directs the port's CEO, who leads about 550 employees in developing and promoting harbor activities. Members are appointed by the mayor and confirmed by Long Beach City Council. Commissioners may serve up to two six-year terms.

The Port of Long Beach handles trade valued at $200 billion annually and helps support 2.6 million jobs across the country, including 575,000 in Southern California.

CONSTRUCTION

Six-story 173-unit affordable housing project breaks ground in Midtown

The Long Beach Boulevard project will house low-income and extremely low-income residents and is on track for completion in mid-2026.

Staff Report

Signal Tribune

Mayor Rex Richardson, City officials and representatives from Meta Housing and Bank of America stuck their shovels in the dirt at 1400 Long Beach Blvd. on July 19, marking the start of construction on the city's newest affordable housing development: 1400 Long Beach.

The project launched at the morning groundbreaking ceremony will be a six-story, 163-unit affordable housing building in the Midtown neighborhood.

Los-Angeles based company Meta Housing is developing 1400 Long Beach, which will feature one, two and three-bedroom units as well as amenities such as a children's play area and an outdoor courtyard.

"We are thrilled to begin construction for this exciting project in Midtown," said Richardson in a public statement. "It carries on our commitment to prioritizing affordable housing options for our community, as we continue to produce affordable housing at record levels. And because of this great project, 163 Central Long Beach families will have stability and better opportunities to thrive."

Several City officials as well as representatives from Bank of America and Meta Housing break ground at 1400 Long Beach Blvd.

What was a vacant commercial address at 1400 Long Beach Blvd. will soon become a home for low and extremely low-income renters who earn between 30 and 70% of the area median income (AMI). The building is a $87.6 million investment that is scheduled to be finished in mid-2026.

"This development activates a vacant site with much needed quality, affordable housing and enhance the livability of the community," said Sixth District Councilmember Suely Saro in a public statement. "I am proud that Council District 6 continues to contribute to increasing housing availability, meanwhile revitalizing neighborhoods."

The Midtown area development is part of the City's expanded efforts to provide affordable housing for all residents and incorporate underused and vacant lots.

Affordable housing developments in Long Beach that have already opened this year include the 77-unit 26 Point 2, located at 3950 E. Pacific Coast Highway and the 87-unit Wellspring development, located at 1500 E. Anaheim St.

Further details about the City's affordable housing plans can be found in Long Beach Community Development's 2023 Annual Report.

A WEEKLY LIST OF THINGS TO DO IN LONG BEACH AND SIGNAL HILL

Along with the summer slew of movies and concerts in the park, this week is filled with art events, community clean-ups and educational workshops.

Artwork from local youth will be on display at the Museum of Latin Art, and youth wishing to make art of their own can attend a printmaking workshop at the Long Beach Museum of Art. Both events are on Friday. Saturday presents multiple opportunities to help clean up the community and a chance to learn about agave distilling.

Families can attend a mental health workshop at the United Cambodian Community Sunday morning, and those who want to protect their vehicle from catalytic converter theft can register for an LBPD event Saturday.

26 FRIDAY

PRESCHOOL STORYTIME & PLAY TIME

10 a.m. to 11 a.m. Children ages 3 to 5 can enjoy an hour of play, music, stories and snacks at the Signal Hill Public Library (1800 E Hill St.). Free.

ARTIVISM STUDENT EXHIBITION

1 p.m. to 3 p.m. The public is invited to view an exhibit of artwork created by local youth at the Museum of Latin American Art (628 Alamitos Ave.). Their artwork is inspired by activism and aims to challenge stereotypes and social issues. Free.

TEEN ARTMAKING

2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Teens in the ninth through 12th grade are invited to the Long Beach Museum of Art (2300 E Ocean Blvd.) for a workshop on printmaking. All materials will be provided. All skill levels are welcome. Registration through Eventbrite is required. Free.

27 SATURDAY

ETCH & CATCH

8 a.m. to 9 a.m. Long Beach residents can have their VIN or license plate number etched onto their catalytic converter by the Long Beach Police Department at its North Division station (4891 Atlantic Ave.). This will help police track and recover a catalytic converter if it gets stolen. Attendees must be the registered owner of the vehicle and bring their driver's license, vehicle registration and confirmation of their appointment. To register for the event and fill out the required waiver, visit the City's online event calendar. Free.

COMMUNITY CLEAN-UP

8 a.m. to noon. Volunteers are needed to help clean the DeForest Park Neighborhood (6255 DeForest Ave.). This event is organized by the City of Long Beach.

Signal Hill man pleads no contest to manslaughter after murder conviction overturned

Edson Eduardo Rufino was originally sentenced to 20 years to life in prison, but has now been resentenced to 12 years for fatally stabbing someone.

City News Service
Southern California Local News

A Signal Hill resident whose murder conviction was overturned in the April 2020 stabbing death of a man in Long Beach pleaded no contest to voluntary manslaughter.

Edson Eduardo Rufino was sentenced Tuesday to 12 years in state prison in connection with his plea, according to the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office.

Edson Eduardo Rufino plead no contest to voluntary manslaughter stemming from the April 2020 stabbing.

The case against Rufino was sent back to a Long Beach courtroom after a state appeals court panel found in a 2-1 ruling last November that a prosecutor "misstated the requirements for heat of passion" involving the lesser offense of voluntary manslaughter and that the panel's majority "can conceive of no reasonable tactical purpose for defense counsel to not object to the prosecutor's misstatement of the law on this issue."

Associate Justice Lamar W. Baker objected to the reversal, writing in his dissent that he believes "there could be good reasons why defense counsel did not object to the prosecution's argument" and that he believed "there is no basis to conclude defendant's trial attorney provided ineffective assistance of counsel on this record."

Long Beach opens pet food pantry for homeless animal lovers

Staff Report

The Long Beach Department of Health and Human Services opened a new pet food pantry at the City's Multi-Service Center (MSC) to support pet owners in need earlier this month.

"We are thrilled to announce this new partnership and are so grateful to Project Street Vet and Kismet for making it happen," Mayor Rex Richardson said in a public statement. "Pets provide comfort, companionship and unconditional love. For people experiencing homelessness, pets can also foster a sense of normalcy and family in a world that can otherwise be very lonely."

This initiative is backed by Project Street Vet, a nonprofit organization dedicated to aiding the pets of people experiencing homelessness, and Kismet, a pet brand recently co-founded by celebrity couple John Legend and Chrissy Teigen. Legend attended the opening ceremony, marking Kismet's donation of over 2,500 pounds of dog food and treats to Project Street Vet.

The Multi-Service Center serves as a comprehensive resource for homeless services in Long Beach. Visitors can now access the pet food pantry during the center's operating hours. Long Beach is now the 10th community to benefit from Project Street Vet, which provides veterinary care to the pets of those facing homelessness and housing instability. This organization, mainly run by volunteers, has collaborated with the Health Department on pet healthcare initiatives since 2023.

"We are animal lovers to our core and supporting our local pet communities has always been very important to us when building Kismet," Kismet Chief Executive Officer Mathé Young Mosny, said in a public statement. "We're proud to work alongside Project Street Vet and the City of Long Beach to bring food to those in need."

The City of Long Beach has been gathering pet food and other essentials through donation events and collection boxes at public libraries since early 2023. The new pet food pantry at the MSC is an extension of these efforts, ensuring a consistent supply of pet food for those in need.

HOPE AND BONE

"I feel like I'm at this transition time in my life," Hocking said. "It just really felt it was time to have an exhibition of my own work ... I feel like I had a number of things that I really wanted to say and talk about through my work and a lot of work that I wanted to share in a larger fashion and I really wanted to push myself as an artist."

The gallery will also include an interactive piece viewers can walk into, inspired by her brother's life and representing beauty persisting through grief, as well as over a dozen other works from throughout Hocking's artist residencies, encapsulating a lifetime of growth from the 54-year-old artist.

Courtesy of Kimberly Hocking

"Hope Reborn," a 1999 mixed media sculpture created using VW bug bumpers and found objects, will be featured in Kimberly Hocking's "Hope and Bone: An Apothecary of Small Acts."

A large element of Hocking's transition—and exhibition—is her performance piece on becoming a warrior. Hocking shaved her head last year and has captured two photographs of herself everyday since, and will end the show with over 700 images of her process.

"The act of shaving my head and kind of becoming a warrior I've done twice in my life, and that's been another way to connect with [my brother], to do something I feel is brave and takes a lot of courage and was also a way to bring me closer to him even though it's been so many years," Hocking said.

Viewers will be able to read the poetic "Warrior's Prayer" that Hocking wrote about this time in her life. The prayer will connect to different parts of the show, as residents walk from room-to-room they'll see the themes in the prayer embodied through sculptures, photographs and installations.

Hocking said creating a cohesive, life-spanning show was one of the biggest challenges, but it's now an element that she is most excited for people to experience. From the darker, monochromatic parts of the show diving into grief, death and the beauty in that, to the more colorful and reflective parts of the exhibition exploring transformation and life.

"I think there really is a consideration of moving through the space and I wanted to give this sense of being on a journey with me, with my process as an artist, and seeing different parts of the journey like my warrior's process and the way that I've changed," Hocking said.

The act of putting together her solo exhibition was yet another transformation. On top of the technical aspects like figuring out where and how to display pieces, Hocking said she gained a new level of appreciation for her art and perspective on life.

While she usually spends months with her guest artists poring through their work and learning about their lives to better inform the show, Hocking had to do the same to herself, resulting in what she called a "shift and awakening."

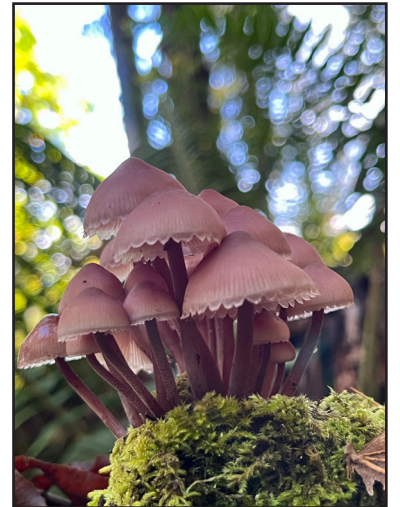

"There are things that have come out to me during this and it's the way I see beauty in so many things, like looking at death and grief," Hocking said. "I think it's a place people don't want to go, but because of my brother and how much he means to me, it's truly a reflection of my soul. I feel like there's this magical place I've always known is in me, and seeing it come together is a confirmation."

"Hope and Bone: An Apothecary of Small Acts" will open to the public with a reception on July 27 from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. at Greenly Art Space at 2698 Junipero Ave. #113. The reception will include drinks and refreshments.

Residents who wish to see the exhibition can do so by calling (562) 533-4020 to make an appointment through mid-October.

Federal funding allocated to lower emissions near Port of Long Beach

City News Service
Southern California Local News

Nearly $500 million in federal funding will help efforts to decarbonize the transportation and freight sectors, and improve air quality for Southern California residents, U.S. Sen. Alex Padilla announced Monday.

The funding came in part of the EPA's Climate Pollution Reduction Grants program and the Inflation Reduction Act. Money will be used to support projects that reduce emissions generated by goods movement near the Ports of Long Beach and Los Angeles, and invest in zero-emission equipment and electric switcher trains.

"Today's historic half a billion dollar investment marks a consequential step in curbing the harmful effects of toxic air pollution for current and future generations," Padilla said in a public statement. "Southern California is the heart of our nation's goods movement, and by making these crucial investments in zero emission infrastructure, we are one step closer to protecting our planet, decarbonizing the heavy-duty sector, and improving air quality for underserved communities who for too long have been left behind."

In total, EPA awarded 25 applicants a combined $4.3 billion through its program to implement community-driven solutions that address climate crisis, reduce air pollution, advance environmental justice, as well as accelerate America's clean energy transition.

When combined, the proposed projects would reduce greenhouse gas pollution by as much as 971 million metric tons of carbon dioxide equivalent by 2050, roughly the emissions from 5 million average homes' energy use each year for over 25 years, according to the EPA.

"The Climate Pollution Reduction Grants being unveiled today will deliver unprecedented resources to states, local governments, and tribes — here in Southern California and across the U.S. — for local solutions that can provide national examples to accelerate the needed transition off of fossil fuels," EPA Pacific Southwest Regional Administrator Martha Guzman said in a public statement. "These efforts will create jobs, reduce the emissions fueling climate change, and clean up the dirty, dangerous air that too many already overburdened communities have breathed for too long."

Vanessa Delgado, chair of South Coast AQMD's Governing Board, estimated that over the next 25 years the funding will reduce 12 million metric tons of carbon emissions. She also noted 1,600 tons of smog forming emissions will be avoided annually while creating green jobs and fostering economic growth.

Long Beach residents can donate a variety of items to people experiencing homelessness during the Department of Health and Human Services' upcoming donation drive-thru.

The department's Main Facilities Center located at 2525 Grand Ave., will be accepting essential items from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. this Saturday. Following the event, donations will be distributed at the Multi-Service Center (MSC) and by local partner organizations.

"Since 2023, our incredible community has been coming together to collect items for people experiencing homelessness, contributing over 39,000 items, which we distribute to people experiencing homelessness and our partners, including nonprofits and faith-based organizations, who serve our neighbors experiencing homelessness," said Mayor Rex Richardson in a public statement. "Donating an essential item is one small way you can make a big difference."

Long Beach Homeless Services Bureau Manager Paul Duncan remarks on the importance of remembering those who have lost their lives to homelessness during a candlelight vigil at Forest Lawn Mortuary on Dec. 21, 2022.

The following items are requested for Saturday's donation drive:

- Supplies: Backpacks filled with items such as sunscreen, reusable water bottles, sun hats, flashlights, battery packs, batteries (especially D batteries) and charging cables.
- Clothing: Sweatpants, shirts, socks, underwear, caps, hoodies, towels, blankets ranging from size small to XXL. Gently used versions of these items will also be accepted.

- Pets: Pet care kits with items such as pet food, treats, collars, leashes, pet toys or collapsible pet bowls.

- Food: Canned food (along with small, manual can openers), bottled juices and/or water, granola bars, power bars, instant oatmeal or instant soup.

- Kits: Hygiene kits or house-warming gift kits from the Multi-Service Center's Amazon Wish List. Welcome home kits containing items from the list and an uplifting hand-written note within the kits are also encouraged.

Gift cards can also be donated directly to the MSC but will not be accepted during the donation drive-thru; drop-off times can be scheduled by calling 562-570-4586.

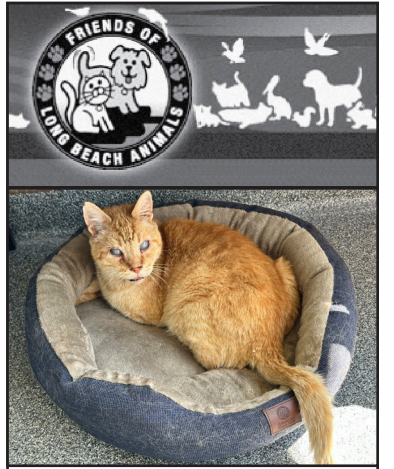

Physical items can also be donated at several locations throughout Long Beach, including all open Long Beach Public Library locations during business hours. Additional donation drop-off locations include the following:

- Boys and Girls Club of Long Beach (3635 Long Beach Blvd.) – Open Mondays through Fridays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

- Scherer Park Community Center, (4654 Pasadena Ave.) – Open Mondays through Fridays 3 to 6 p.m.

The City has collected over 39,000 community donations for unhoused residents since February 2023. Local nonprofit organizations who support community members experiencing homelessness can receive a portion of donated items for distribution through the City of Long Beach Donation Request Form.

Pet of the week: Uncle Roger Uncle Roger is a 14-year-old senior orange fellow who came in as a stray. He was whisked off to medical to assess his eyes and was found to lack vision completely in his left eye because of a condition called corneal edema. The lens in his right eye has slipped out of position — he may have limited vision in that eye.

Otherwise, he's in reasonably good health for his age; the foster or adopter will need to continue with routine care after a veterinary consult. Uncle Roger loves to be petted and talked to as he relaxes in Long Beach Animal Care Services' catio. The volunteers would love to see this golden cat spending his golden years in a golden, sunny spot in a home. To adopt or foster Uncle Roger, email PetAdopt@longbeach.gov to speed the process, or call (562) 570-7387. Better yet, meet them in person at Long Beach Animal Care Services, 7700 E. Spring St., Long Beach, at entrance to El Dorado Park (no parking fee for shelter visitors). Visiting hours are Wednesday–Friday, 10 a.m.–5:30 p.m., and Saturday–Sunday, 10 a.m.–4 p.m. Ask for ID#A722911.
