‘Represented at Last!’ will trace the path of Long Beach’s diverse politics and people

The Historical Society of Long Beach hopes to share stories of those who fought for change and representation.

Former Councilmember James Wilson. Mayor Rex Richardson. Councilmember Suely Saro. Former Mayor Robert Garcia. What do these people have in common? They all made history in Long Beach politics, as the first Black councilmember, first Black mayor, first Cambodian councilmember and first openly gay mayor, respectively.

Beginning this Friday, these leaders, among many others over the past century, will be recognized for their place in the city’s ever-changing political landscape.

The Historical Society of Long Beach (HSLB) is unveiling its newest mobile exhibit on Friday: a deep dive into Long Beach’s political history through the lens of its Black, Latino, Indigenous and LGBTQ communities.

The traveling exhibit titled “Represented at Last! The Story of Long Beach’s Transformation in Politics and People” combines photos, interviews, historical accounts and biographies.

The exhibit will be unveiled at HSLB’s Bixby Knolls museum and travel to different parts of the city throughout the year, offering people a chance to learn about their local history. “Represented at Last!” will be made up of nine six-foot panels featuring local narratives, photos submitted from residents and over a year of research.

“I think that Long Beach is in a really interesting position right now,” said Julie Bartolotto, executive director for the Historical Society of Long Beach. “I hope that it piques their interest in how this place came to be like it is now and it piques their interest in learning more in general about local history.”

Bartolotto said she also hopes the exhibit will reach younger audiences and those living in areas of the city most overlooked such as North and West Long Beach, and various ethnic groups in the city. Many of the images used in their exhibits come from residents who have a rich history in Long Beach. So the more people that know about HSLB’s archiving efforts, the better chance they have of creating a complete picture of the city.

Local leaders in the city who tore down barriers have given interviews as part of “Represented at Last!” to help piece together the city’s history. These journeys gathered by a team of historians trace the political and economical growth of the often marginalized groups that make up much of Long Beach’s population.

Residents will not only learn about the waves of people who migrated to Long Beach in the 20th century, such as the Cambodian, Black, Hispanic and LGBTQ communities, but the struggles they

MISSING PERSON

Update: Missing Long Beach man found unharmed in Los Angeles

Davontay Clark was found at a medical facility in Los Angeles on Aug. 30 after being missing for over a week.

A local nonverbal autistic man was found unharmed after going missing for over a week. Twenty-nine-year-old Davontay Clark went missing from his home on Aug. 22, and was found at a medical facility in Los Angeles on Aug. 30. The Long Beach Police Department learned he was safe on Sept. 4.

Clark left home on foot, with no access to a car or cell phone, and does not have a tracking device. However, his family lives near a Metro train station, and Clark knows how to use trains and buses, according to LBPD.

He has made it to other cities

when he went missing in the past as well, such as San Pedro and Torrance.

Since 2020, Clark has been reported missing seven times, according to reports by the Long Beach Police Department (LBPD). But it had never taken this long for police to confirm he was safe before. Out of the six previous times he's been reported missing, in five of those cases he was found either the same day he went missing, or the day after.

The one exception was in September 2021, when he was taken to a medical facility as a John Doe the same day he left his home, and it took the LBPD 11 days to learn his whereabouts.

Elopement, also known as wandering, is an urge some autistic individuals have which causes them to try to leave or escape safe places or people, often putting them in danger.

According to a 2017 report by the National Autism Association, 808 people with autism spectrum disorder were reported missing to police after eloping/wandering from 2011 to 2016, and in 139 of those cases the missing person died. The cause of death in most of these cases was drowning (71%), followed by being hit by a vehicle (18%) or train (4%).

A 2009 study of autistic adults living in an institution found that 34% "exhibited elopement behavior."

LABOR

Westin Long Beach hotel workers unanimously approve new contract

Workers at the hotel will see a 60% wage increase over the next four years with new contract ratified.

Staff Report

Signal Tribune

This past Labor Day carried extra weight for the workers at the Westin Long Beach hotel, who unanimously ratified their new working contract on Aug. 30.

The exterior of the Westin Long Beach hotel in May 2022. Before ratifying their new contract, workers at the Westin Long Beach had been on strike since July 6.

Westin Long Beach room attendants, cooks, front desk employees and housekeepers had been striking in front of the hotel before and after work since July 6. They joined over 10,000 other hotel workers across the nation who have been pushing for new contracts with higher wages and employee protections for over a year.

Hotel workers at 73 hotels have now ratified new agreements, according to UNITE HERE Local 11, which represents more than 32,000 hospitality workers in Southern California and Arizona.

Long Beach hotel and tourism workers received a baseline wage increase to $23 an hour when voters approved Measure RW in March. Since Westin workers are represented at a union, they have the right to advocate for more protections and higher wages.

"We are so excited. We fought so hard. We picketed and struck and organized actions to show we will not stop until we get what we deserve, and now we have won a life-changing agreement," said Juana Melara, housekeeper at Westin Long Beach, in a statement from the union. "There were lots of tears of joy at our ratification vote."

The contract was unanimously approved by the workers at Westin

Long Beach. The new agreement includes an immediate $5 an hour raise and another $6.25 an hour over three and a half years. By the time this contract expires on Jan. 15, 2028, the workers will see wage increases of $11.25 an hour.

In addition to the historic wage increase, Westin workers' contract includes:

- Guaranteed pre-pandemic staffing levels
- Mandatory daily room cleaning
- One of the nation's highest pensions for service workers
- 50 pages of improvements, including Juneteenth as a paid holiday
- Unprecedented rights for immigrants and workers impacted by the carceral system

"The hotel industry repeatedly underestimated the determination and tenacity of the workers. They tried to demoralize and divide us with firings, threats, and violence, but it has only made us stronger," said Kurt Petersen, co-president of UNITE HERE Local 11 in a public statement.

Letters to the editor and commentaries are the opinions of the authors and do not necessarily reflect those of the Signal Tribune or its staff. Although the editorial staff will attempt to verify and/or correct information when possible, letters to the editor and commentaries are opinions, and readers should not assume that they are statements of fact. faced to gain representation and equity. While Long Beach elected its first Black mayor Rex Richardson in 2022, it was roughly 50 years ago when it elected its first Black councilmember James (Jim) Wilson in 1970.

"It hasn't really been that long since basically we went from a City Council that was all white men, or almost all white men, to a very diverse City Council with a majority of women and our first Black mayor," Bartolotto said.

Many changes in the city were slow moving and hard fought, Bartolotto said. Through research and interviews, the team learned about initiatives that required repeated advocacy and faced opposition from those already in power. For instance, when the City Council made it a requirement that councilmembers must live in the district they are hoping to represent, that change had to be defended many times over in the following years.

"We found that in so many cases," Bartolotto said. "It's important for people to know that change doesn't just happen, everybody works together and makes this change happen. There are many many attempts to make these changes, and even sometimes after those changes are enacted there are many challenges against them. We can see this happening at the local level, historically, and nationally as well."

While doing research for this exhibit, Bartolotto said she was struck by how much of Long Beach's history is overlooked. The exhibit also delves into North Long Beach, the Black leaders that came from that part of the city, and the investments that went into growing the area.

The HSLB has been gathering stories and conducting research for "Represented at Last!" for over a year in order to gather these untold stories. Led by historian Victoria Roa, a group of student researchers helped to piece together the complex history of Long Beach politics and demographics.

"I hope that some of the major takeaways that the public gets from this exhibition is the power of local organizing, the importance of lifting up others and representation in local politics," Roa said.

Interviews conducted over the past year will be posted on the HSLB's website sometime this month, Bartolotto said.

Local leaders who will be highlighted through interviews in the exhibit include:

- Dee Andrew — former 6th district councilmember
- Al Austin — 8th district councilmember
- Steve Neal — Harbor Commissioner and former councilmember
- Rex Richardson — Mayor and former councilmember
- Suely Saro — 6th district councilmember
- Gerrie Schipske — former 4th district councilmember
- Roberto Uranga — 7th district councilmember

• Tonia Reyes-Uranga — former 7th district councilmember

Themes presented in the exhibit include Alliances Between Organizations, Challenging the Law, Changing Population and Changing Electorate, and Common Organizations and Empowerment. Two of the panels will focus on a figure from local history with quotes and a short biography on the person.

"I hope that some of the major takeaways that the public gets from this exhibition is the power of local organizing, the importance of lifting up others and representation in local politics."

What did Long Beach's federal and state reps do in August?

Kristen Farrah Naeem
Staff Writer

This installment of the Signal Tribune's monthly series covers actions taken and statements made by Long Beach and Signal Hill's federal and state representatives throughout August.

Elected officials were involved in discussion and legislation surrounding public health, schools, cyberbullying and more. The purpose of this ongoing series is to help the public stay abreast of their elected officials and hold them accountable before and beyond election day.

STD Prevention: On Aug. 8, Garcia, 12th District Representative Barbara Lee and 16 other representatives sent a letter urging the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force to require insurance coverage for the preventative STD (sexually transmitted disease) medicine doxycycline postexposure prophylaxis (doxy PEP) at no cost to patients. Doxy PEP, when taken within three days of sex, significantly reduces the risk of syphilis, chlamydia, and gonorrhea. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) recently recommended healthcare providers counsel high-risk patients on doxy PEP's benefits. The lawmakers' letter requests that the Task Force give doxy PEP an A rating, which would require insurance providers to cover the medication under the Affordable Care Act.

Olympics Funding: On Aug. 9, Garcia and 19 colleagues sent a letter to Speaker of the House Mike Johnson, Leader Hakeem Jeffries, and the Chair and Ranking Member of the House Appropriations Committee urging them to include $200 million for the 2028 Olympics in this year's federal funding legislation. This funding would provide public transit buses to cities that will be hosting Olympic events such as Los Angeles and Long Beach. Previous host cities for the U.S. Olympics, such as Atlanta and Salt Lake City, received similar federal support in the past to expand transit capacity, according to the letter.

Air Quality Bill Moves Forward: On Aug. 8, Gonzalez's Senate Bill 674, The Refinery Pollution Reduction and Transparency Act, passed the state legislature. It's been sent to Governor Gavin Newsom for approval. The bill would set a statewide standard for monitoring air quality at oil refineries across the state in order to measure toxic pollutants and implement methods to protect nearby communities. The legislation would require refineries to notify the public, including through emails and texts, when toxic emissions exceed safe levels. The bill would also require refineries to provide accessible real-time data, submit to third-party audits and provide a root-cause analysis within 24 hours of any incident.

Schools & Climate Change: On Aug. 27, Gonzalez's Senate Bill 1182, the Climate Resilient Schools Act, passed through the state legislature, and is awaiting approval from the governor.

The bill aims to protect California schools from climate change impacts while lowering their greenhouse gas emissions. The bill would require the California Energy Commission (CEC) to craft a comprehensive Master Plan that focuses on sustainability and resiliency in school infrastructures.

California's 44th
Congressional District

During the month of August, Senator Barragán introduced the Compassionate Care Act alongside Senator Richard Blumenthal. The bill aims to improve end-of-life care.

Advance Care Planning Act Introduced: On Aug. 1, Barragán and fellow Senator Richard Blumenthal introduced the Compassionate Care Act, a bill aimed at improving end-of-life care, as well as planning for care in case of severe illness.

Many Americans don't have a plan in case they contract a severe illness, and this legislation seeks to address that gap by providing resources to educate both patients and providers. The act focuses on using telehealth options to make it easier for people to plan their care in advance. It would also create a public awareness campaign, urging residents across the nation to make plans for themselves in case of severe illness, a practice known as "advance care planning."

"We must ensure that every patient's healthcare rights and wishes are respected by increased access to advance care planning (ACP)," said Barragán in a public statement. "Few patients discuss ACP with their providers, and marginalized communities, including individuals with low incomes and non-English speakers, are even less likely to have the conversation. I am proud to introduce the Compassionate Care Act with Senator Blumenthal, as it will create clear guidelines, increase physician education and public awareness, and enhance ACP access for all."

Lower Drug Prices: On Aug. 15, Barragán was present when President Joe Biden and Vice President Kamala Harris announced the first lower drug prices negotiated under Medicare through the Inflation Reduction Act, passed in 2022. This law allows Medicare to directly negotiate prescription drug prices with pharmaceutical companies, similar to practices by the Department of Veterans Affairs and other federal agencies. The new prices for the first 10 selected drugs will take effect in Medicare starting in 2026. These drugs include treatments for a variety of illnesses such as blood cancer, heart failure, blood clots and more.

Training on Drink Safety: Lowenthal's Assembly Bill 2402 was passed by the State Senate on Aug. 26. Now the State Assembly needs to approve the amendments the Senate made to the bill. This bill would require Alcohol and Beverage Control to add information on how to prevent roofing to its trainings offered to restaurant, bar and nightclub staff.

Lids for Drink Safety: On Aug. 29, the State Assembly approved amendments made to Lowenthal's Assembly Bill 2375.

The bill would require bars and nightclubs to offer lids for customers' drinks upon request, and to post signs informing customers that lids are available, in an effort to prevent drink-spiking.

Cyberbullying Bill Passed: Lowenthal's Assembly Bill 2481, the Cyberbullying Protection Act, was passed by the State Assembly on Aug. 31. The bill will now be sent to the governor for a final decision.

If approved, AB 2481 would require social media platforms to clearly outline their cyberbullying reporting procedures in their terms of service.

They would also need to create a way for anyone, whether they have an account or not, to report cyberbullying or content that breaks the rules. This would include allowing people to upload screenshots as evidence.

Large social media platforms would further have to verify school principals and mental health professionals as "trusted reporters," who would be able to alert the platform when they find content that they deem to be harmful to minors. When one of these verified reporters flags content as harmful, it would trigger an expedited review of the content by a human employed by the social media platform.

These platforms would then have to annually publish the number of reports they receive from these trusted reporters on a publicly accessible website.

Hours extended at cooling centers amid heat wave

Staff Report
Signal Tribune

As temperatures are expected to soar past 100 degrees this weekend, Long Beach has issued a heat alert and extended hours at its six cooling centers.

A heat alert is issued when the weather forecast exceeds 95 degrees for two consecutive days or an overnight high of 80 degrees for two consecutive nights. The Weather Channel has forecasted highs for Long Beach are 96 degrees on Thursday, 96 on Friday, and 98 on Saturday and Sunday.

Residents are strongly encouraged to take extra precautions to avoid heat exposure and heat-related illness and seek out air-conditioned spaces during peak heat hours.

Select community centers at parks and all Long Beach Public Library locations are available as designated cooling centers during their normal business hours. Residents are advised to contact community centers and library locations ahead of time to confirm they are open in the case of unexpected closures.

Pet of the week:
Jelly

Is Jelly winking at us? Does she know something that we don't know? Maybe! If Jelly could talk, she'd tell you that cats with one eye are just as affectionate and playful as cats with two eyes! Jelly, a 3-month-old domestic shorthair, came to Long Beach Animal Care Services with a bad left eye, which had to be removed. But that hasn't stopped her from living life to the fullest! She loves to play and cuddle with the volunteers and also entertains herself when no one's around. Is she sweet? Would she be named Jelly if she weren't? To adopt or foster Jelly, email Pet-Adopt@longbeach.gov to speed the process, or call (562) 570-7387. Better yet, meet them in person at Long Beach Animal Care Services, 7700 E. Spring St., Long Beach, at entrance to El Dorado Park (no parking fee for shelter visitors). Visiting hours are Wednesday-Friday, 10 a.m.-5:30 p.m., and Saturday-Sunday, 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Ask for ID#A722966.

The Long Beach Urban Design and Civic Engagement Internship Program will be an eight month course, running from October 23 through June 13, 2025.

The internship will provide a series of workshops, seminars, guest speaker events and networking opportunities. Internships will be assigned through Future LB alongside the Long Beach Community Design Center and Civic Confidence LLC.

Interns will converse with professionals in their respective fields, with participating guests representing public, private and non-profit entities. After successfully finishing the internship, students will receive a $22 stipend per hour for up to 600 program hours.

"By empowering urban design and civic engagement students, we are nurturing the next generation of leaders and ensuring that the urban landscape reflects the diverse voices and visions of our community," said Mayor Rex Richardson in a public statement.

This program is open to students ages 18 to 30 who are currently in community college or a four-year university program majoring in urban planning, architecture or a similar study. Interns must have reliable transportation. Long Beach residents as well as students living in low-income and underserved communities will receive priority for the program.

Further eligibility details and participant requirements can be found on the Long Beach Urban Design and Civic Engagement Internship Program webpage. Applications can be completed online now through Sept. 19. Scan the QR Code below to view the application:
