VIP Records owner Kelvin Anderson shared his journey growing up on a dirt road in Mississippi and moving to Southern California in 1972 just days after graduating high school to join his brother working at record stores. He took over VIP Records from his brother Cletus in 1979, and went on to launch the rap careers of Snoop Dogg, Nate Dogg and Warren G. Anderson announced his plans to grow the record store into a museum and education center on March 25, 2025.

“I see love for the sign, but not for the mission,” shop owner and hip-hop legend Kelvin Anderson said.

When DJ L.C. got a job at VIP Records in 1988, he was just an 18-year-old looking to make money after the military. By taking that job sorting records, L.C. would become an instrumental figure in Long Beach culture and the birth of G-funk rap, cemented at the corner of Pacific Coast Highway and Martin Luther King Jr. Avenue.

As rap was growing more popular, shop owner Kelvin Anderson purchased a SP 1200 drum machine — just the third ever produced at the time — for his employees to mix sounds and create beats straight out of the shop, and L.C. was hooked.

He watched his cousin DJ Slice and friend Jinx use the equipment to produce music for Ice Cube, Public Enemy and various Long Beach artists. Soon afterwards, L.C. brought some of his friends from Poly High School to do the same; friends like Snoop Dogg and Warren G.

The teenager from West Long Beach found his calling, and he and his friends found a place to call home. They went on to put Long Beach on the map as the birthplace of West Coast rap, and helped to cement VIP Records as an essential part of hip-hop history.

On Tuesday, March 25, Anderson was surrounded by his children and people like L.C., whose lives were changed through VIP Records, to announce his plans to create a music history museum and educational center.

The shop’s nonprofit arm, The VIP Family Foundation, is joining efforts with nonprofit Creative Class Collective, which works to encourage creativity in impactful ways throughout the city.

“I’m the first to admit that I can raise funds for you, but I can’t raise funds for me. I’m just not that guy,” Anderson said. “But I do know that there’s a lot of love for VIP [Records] locally and Group after group came up to the VIP Records replica sign inside the shop on March 25, 2025. It served as a glimpse of what is possible once the iconic sign is restored to its former glory, which Kelvin Anderson hopes will bring people to an attached museum and education center.

Student and community advocates demand more after updated LBUSD immigration policy

Students say the District’s immigration resources must become more accessible.

Richard H. Grant | Signal Tribune

Students from Long Beach Unified School District, including multiple students from Long Beach Polytechnic High School, have voiced their concerns about the District’s immigration policy to the LBUSD board.

Briana Mendez-Padilla

Education Reporter

As Yesenia Barron led a group of parents through a tour at Long Beach Polytechnic High School, the senior and CIC pathway ambassador was expecting to receive questions from parents about classes and extracurricular activities. Instead, she said, Spanish-speaking parents more frequently asked her: Will my child be safe at school?

Barron said this experience within the Long Beach Unified School District (LBUSD) represents the current state of the world — immigrant students and parents are living in fear.

As a part of the Latino community, she finds it important to advocate for herself and others. It is what motivated her to join local youth social justice organization Californians for Justice (CFJ), and what brought her to the podium at LBUSD’s board meetings.

“Being here for my community is really important for me, especially because for the Latino community it’s difficult to get where we’re at, it’s difficult to seek higher education,” Barron told the Signal Tribune. “I’m here because I want to protect the community and speak up for them.”

LBUSD drafted and presented an updated immigration policy at its March 19 board meeting.

Board Policy 5145.13 addresses the District’s response to immigration enforcement activities on LBUSD campuses and was adopted in 2018. The updated policy aims to more clearly outline how the District responds to immigration enforcement as well as highlight the type of information the District collects regarding immigration status.

“I want to be really clear that there’s nothing that we collect right now related to enrollment, program, participation, nutrition, application, childcare and nothing requires us to know that information. We don’t seek it,” Deputy Superintendent Tiffany Brown said.

Kick off Earth Month with 'Save the Planet, Be the Hero' this Saturday

Richard H. Grant | Signal Tribune

Long Beach is hosting Be the Hero: Earth Month Kickoff Event will take place on March 29, 2025 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Admiral Kidd Park.

Staff Report

Signal Tribune

Residents are invited to protect the planet at Long Beach's Save the Planet, Be the Hero: Earth Month Kickoff Event on Saturday, March 29.

This free, family-friendly event will educate the community on how to take action to protect themselves, others and the planet from nicotine/tobacco/second hand smoke for a healthier environment. The event is organized by the Long Beach Health Department, Tobacco Education and Prevention Program, the City's Office of Climate Action and the Neighbor-to-Neighbor Program.

"Through this Neighbor-to-Neighbor Program event, we are providing an opportunity for our community to not only learn about environmental stewardship and the dangers of tobacco, but to do so while building strong connections with their neighbors," said Mayor Rex Richardson in a public statement. "We are committed to bringing people together to inspire action and create a healthier, more sustainable Long Beach."

The Earth Month kickoff event will feature interactive games, educational booths and giveaways meant to inspire the community to take steps towards sustainable and greener options. There will be hands-on activities focused on combating climate change, and people can learn how small steps can lead to large changes in the environment.

The Tobacco Education and Prevention Program will educate visitors on the dangers of tobacco use and promote healthy, tobacco-free lifestyles. Residents can also learn about the impact of tobacco on the environment, particularly through cigarette litter, as cigarette butts are the most littered item in the world.

The Earth Month kickoff event will also serve as the launch of the Long Beach Climate Action Toolkit, a resource for residents interested in taking their climate hero training to the next level. The toolkit will be distributed to people at the event, and available on the Neighbor-to-Neighbor Program webpage beginning March 31.

Those interested in attending are encouraged to register on the City's website, but registration is not required.

Long Beach's Save the Planet, Be the Hero: Earth Month Kickoff Event will take place on Saturday, March 29 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Admiral Kidd Park (2125 Santa Fe Ave.).

LBUSD IMMIGRATION POLICY

An updated draft is a start, but students highlight accessibility needs

Several students shared how while they recognized the District's efforts like creating a webpage with immigration resources, they are concerned about accessibility.

Rylee Hildreth, a 10th grader at Poly High School, emphasized that most of the material the District sent out is digital, yet not all families have access to the internet or a computer at home.

"The District needs to implement more attainable ways for these resources and information to reach all students," Hildreth said. "Students are the real experts in their own school experience, and we demand that the board listen to us, to not be overlooked like we have in the past."

Other recommendations from CFJ student leaders include:

- Providing comprehensive staff training on what to do if they see ICE as well as overall protections from policing and discrimination for all students.
- Implementing an alert system that gives an immediate text or email to parents if ICE is spotted on school campuses.
- Connecting with teachers, associated student bodies and wellness centers directly to inform the student population of these resources through rallies, assemblies and mandatory videos.
- Connecting with students to get their input on the currently available resources and what resources may be lacking.

• Making digital resources available in print as well.

Community Partnership

Throughout these mobilization efforts of students showing up to the board meetings, CFJ has received guidance from Long Beach immigrant advocacy group, ÓRALE.

This partnership happened naturally, said CFJ organizer Megan Lane, after ÓRALE facilitated a Know Your Rights Workshop for CFJ members. She said students were activated by that conversation and felt the intersectionality between them being young Black women and the criminalization of undocumented students.

Fernando Acevedo, a community lawyer with ÓRALE, has helped facilitate these efforts by reviewing policy and identifying key recommendations. Acevedo also thanked the board for its attention to the previous feedback, and upon reviewing the updated policy, had some additional recommendations. He urged the board:

- Ensure clarity and communication with parents and guardians to make sure they understand that consent to any information request is voluntary.
- When presented with an administrative warrant, the District denies the request outright without any additional steps.
- Require — instead of using language like "encourage" — video recording for any interactions with immigration enforcement.
- Include a provision facilitating the sharing of any documentation of interactions with immigration enforcement with impacted district community members, so that they may use it as required, potentially for deportation proceedings or anything that may result from those interactions with immigration enforcement.

LBUSD drafted and presented an updated immigration policy at its March 19 board meeting.

What's Next

The District will incorporate community feedback into an updated draft to be presented at a later board meeting.

"There is some work to be done with reminding and affirming," Board Member Juan Benitez said.

Lane said the District needs to be held accountable to these policies and more importantly, bring students in for collaboration.

"You don't know what's going on in schools without having students in the conversation, so it's a great start, but let's bring in students to get this moving," Lane said.

Barron hopes the District continues expanding its efforts.

"[LBUSD] has so much power to really make a difference, and it's not something they're doing with the policies that they've made," Barron said. "They've done their best, but I don't think it's necessarily the best they can do, especially when it comes to making sure ICE doesn't come onto campus."

REVIEW

Garage Theatre's 'Tragedy Giftshop' asks: are we mourning or monetizing tragedy?

Kristen Farrah Naeem

Staff Writer

There's a true hidden gem of the theatrical arts currently on stage in downtown Long Beach's The Garage Theatre.

I was already aware of The Garage Theatre's tradition of putting on original plays that can't be seen anywhere else. Still, I Google'd "Tragedy Giftshop" afterwards, almost expecting it to be a rendition of a well-known story: But nope — it was a brand-new play from the mind of local playwright Ryan McClary and directed by Matthew Anderson that premiered earlier this month, only at the Garage Theatre.

The quality of the play is on par with performances at far larger and more recognizable theaters with bigger budgets.

Set in a small All-American town in the wake of a deadly school shooting, "Tragedy Giftshop" explores the dangers of gun violence, toxic positivity and the monetization of human suffering. The play serves as a stark reminder of the inadequacy of offering "thoughts and prayers" in the face of ongoing, systemic violence.

The story follows multiple characters from Townsville on the day of a school shooting at the local high school and the weeks that follow. As the community is left devastated and confused, a mysterious new business rolls into town: Boon's Emporium, run by the sunny Chris Udall (Rory Cowan).

Boon's provides the public with objects to memorialize the disturbing tragedies that occur all too often in life, from white bicycles for roadside memorials to T-shirts and other totems emblazoned with the images of victims.

But as the play goes on, the audience has to consider whether the seemingly well-intentioned offerings are to memorialize tragedies and their victims, or fetishize them.

Courtesy of the Garage Theatre

The Garage Theatre's fall 2023 production of "Terror at the Pike" mixes Long Beach history, humor and an eccentric cast.

Cowan perfectly embodies the cheery businessman with an upbeat attitude, so much so that I was worried at the start that this was going to be an overly saccharine performance with a simplified feel-good message. Thankfully, more layers to Cowan's character are slowly revealed and challenged in a way that engrosses the audience.

The set was particularly immersive, with seats set up along each wall in the small theater, and actors often getting within inches of the audience. Throughout the play, the actors would enter and exit through multiple different doors, so the audience never knew where they would appear from, adding an extra layer of tension to the story.

Everyone in the cast gave emotional yet grounded performances in this thoughtful and poignant play. Two of the youngest characters, school shooting survivor Heather Morton (Madi Burns) and the ghost of school shooting victim Dominick Wicklow (Sage Forsythe) are at the center of the story. Burns and Forsythe shine in their respective roles, and capture the angst, awkwardness and subtle hilarity of teenagers working through their own trauma and that of their community.

Forsythe in particular showed great range in her acting, coming across as a harmless and helpful apparition for most of the play, but still delivering a genuinely unsettling performance as a ghoulish, yet justified spirit of vengeance near the end.

The story is prescient for the times we're living in, and surprisingly applicable in our daily lives. I found myself disturbed while listening to a true crime podcast days later, as the hosts excitedly went over their own speculations on a gruesome case.

We love to sensationalize and dissect tragedies, but our society is far less willing to do the work to prevent them. Memorialization is not the same as taking action — a lesson underlined by "Tragedy Giftshop."

"Tragedy Giftshop" will be performed at The Garage Theatre, located at 251 E Seventh St., on Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. through April 5. General admission tickets can be purchased for $28 at the door or on the theater's website.

Samantha Diaz | Signal Tribune

(Top) Over a video call, Snoop Dogg gave his support for the creation of a museum and education center at the VIP Records location on March 25, 2025. He said the museum should be built surrounding the shop, as the birthplace of West Coast G-funk rap, but added, "if they don't want to act right we'll find somewhere where we can put it." (Bottom) Every wall inside of VIP Records is adorned with historic music memorabilia, showcasing decades worth of hip-hop history.

coast to coast, all around the world and I just have to put together the right program in order to raise these funds to build this museum ... I'm ready to make this hard push.

We just gotta get creative."

In a surprise FaceTime appearance from Snoop Dogg, he voiced support for the creation of the museum, adding that he hopes it can be built in its iconic location, "but like I say, if they don't want to act right we'll find somewhere where we can put it."

He also thanked Anderson for the ways VIP Records changed his life, highlighting the difference the shop can make for youth in the city.

"I just want to thank you for giving us the opportunity to actually showcase our talent back when rap wasn't so popular and it wasn't so easy to do. You, DJ Slice, L.C., all of y'all at the VIP gave us hope, y'all gave us an opportunity to make our dream come true, gave us a platform to hear our voice for the first time on a cassette, to hear what we sounded like, to see what we meant to people," Snoop Dogg said. "So thank you for giving us an option, for giving us an avenue and opening up the record store to us and our dreams."

An 'All In One' Center For Music, Culture And Youth

As the owner of Long Beach's VIP Records, Anderson has taken his job with great care. It was not only to study and memorize the radio top 40 charts, or to sell music from independent artists that couldn't be found on the radio, but to create a safe space for the youth in East Long Beach. At least, that's the role he took on.

Nowadays, the city's youth affectionately refers to Anderson as "Pop" — both a father figure and mentor. At 70 years old, Anderson now has plans to keep his legacy going, with a music history museum and education center built out of VIP Records.

The City of Long Beach designated the iconic VIP Records sign as a historic landmark in 2017, and have announced plans to restore the sign. However, the shop itself is not historically designated, and therefore is not guaranteed any help from the City.

Anderson is negotiating with the City to have the sign restored and erected across the street in time for the 2028 Olympics, but his vision spans further than a photo-op.

"People will come just to see the sign, but they'll be amazed at what they'll see."

- Kelvin Anderson, owner of VIP Records

He shared his goal to purchase the entire shopping center where VIP Records has been for 46 years. The center currently holds a laundromat, 7/11, smoke shop, MMA gym, perfume store, beauty supply store, massage parlor, beauty salon and boxing gym.

In that space, they hope to create an "all in one" facility with a recording studio, printing space and radio station where they can teach youth to record and create music, as well as the marketing side of the music industry.

Over the last 46 years, the shopping center has been sold three times, Anderson said, and he's hopeful the two nonprofits can make strides this year to purchase it themselves. When asked if he thinks the City will contribute to making the museum possible, Anderson expressed doubts.

"That would be great, but I don't think they have that kind of love for me. I see love for the sign, but not for the mission," Anderson told the Signal Tribune. "My concern is I'm 70 years old now and a two-time cancer survivor. Today really energized me to see the turnout and the positive energy. I'm kind of in a rush with time ... I expect this to be my legacy."

Anderson's vision for the museum includes a journey of music history displaying equipment used from the '80s up until now, and the music made with the equipment over the years. He pictures the museum with a performance area that can hold up to 50 people, so young talent has a chance to shine, continuing VIP Records' legacy.

"People will come just to see the sign, but they'll be amazed at what they'll see," Anderson said. He added that he wants the museum to encapsulate the history of Black people's contributions to music, not just hip-hop. "It's very important that this is a full-circle museum."

Plan for potential disaster at Tsunami Preparedness Fair this Saturday

Staff Report

Signal Tribune

Long Beach residents are invited to be proactive about the dangers of natural disasters at the Tsunami Preparedness Fair this Saturday at Will Rogers Mini Park.

This event is organized by the Long Beach Department of Disaster Preparedness and Emergency Communications and is part of California's Tsunami Preparedness Week (March 22-30). This annual observance is aimed at encouraging residents to develop and practice evacuation plans for their families, home and workplace.

"We are fortunate to live on the Pacific Rim with miles of beautiful beaches and oceanfront views; however, with that comes the threat of tsunamis," said Mayor Rex Richardson in a public statement. "Tsunami Preparedness Week and the Tsunami Preparedness Fair will provide opportunities for residents to learn more and practice their plans to stay safe during a tsunami by moving to higher ground."

The Tsunami Preparedness Fair will have expert speakers and resource booths from City departments as well as regional emergency management agencies that will have educational materials and tips on how to prepare.

Richard H. Grant | Signal Tribune

Long Beach residents are encouraged to prepare for tsunamis by attending the Tsunami Preparedness Fair this Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Attendees can take part in the optional Tsunami Walk at the event, which will simulate a tsunami evacuation and encourage residents to take action when within a tsunami hazard zone. The walk will depart from Will Rogers Mini Park and heading to the Red Car Greenbelt (Fourth Street and Park Avenue) outside the tsunami hazard zone.

During the walk, Disaster Preparedness staff will provide resources and preparedness tips. For any access accommodations, residents are encouraged to email Disaster Preparedness Officer Luis Valdez at Luis.Valdez@longbeach.

Pursuant to R&TC Section 3692.3, TTC sells all property "as is" and the County and its employees are not liable for any known or unknown conditions of the properties, including, but not limited to, errors in the records of the Office of the Assessor (Assessor) pertaining to improvement of the property.

If TTC sells a property, parties of interest, as defined by R&TC Section 4675, have a right to file a claim with the County for any proceeds from the sale, which are in excess of the liens and costs required to be paid from the proceeds. If there are any excess proceeds after the application of the minimum bid, TTC will send notice to all parties of interest, pursuant to State law.

Please direct requests for information concerning redemption of tax-defaulted property to the Treasurer and Tax Collector, at 225 North Hill Street, Room 130, Los Angeles, California 90012. Phone calls can be directed to (213) 974-2045, Monday through Friday, 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Pacific Time. TTC's website is located at ttc.lacounty.gov and emails can be directed to auction@ttc.lacounty.gov.

The Assessor's Identification Number (AIN) in this publication refers to the Assessor's Map Book, the Map Page, and the individual Parcel Number on the Map Page. If a change in the AIN occurred, the publication will show both prior and current AINs. An explanation of the parcel numbering system and the referenced maps are available at the Office of the Assessor located at 500 West Temple Street, Room 225, Los Angeles, California 90012, or at assessor.lacounty.gov.

Staff Report

The Long Beach Department of Public Works is inviting the public to a meeting this Saturday where they'll discuss an overview of the Skylinks Regional Stormwater Capture Project and recent updates.

During the meeting, attendees will receive insights on a current project timeline and view the unveiling of the facility's design. Members of the project team will also be on hand to answer questions from the community.

The goal of the Skylinks Regional Stormwater Capture Project is to improve stormwater quality and create usable open space. It will look to do so by intercepting dry-weather flow and stormwater runoff from the Los Cerritos Channel and diverting it to an underground concrete infiltration basin with 2 million gallons of storage.

The project is estimated to cost $10.5 million and is fully funded by Los Angeles County Measure W funds, with additional features including walking trails, benches, native plants and interpretive signage.

The most recently available project update from March 2024 was the publication of its Initial Study/Mitigated Negative Declaration and related documents, which are available to view on the Community Development Department's Environmental Reports website.

Skylinks Golf Course is owned by Long Beach and maintained by the City's Parks, Recreation, and Marine Department. The Los Cerritos Channel is owned and operated by the Los Angeles County Flood Control District.

The Skylinks Regional Stormwater Capture Project community meeting will take place Saturday, March 29 from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Wardlow Park Community Center, located at 3457 Stanbridge Ave.

More information about the project, including a list of previous updates, can be viewed at longbeach.gov/srscp.

Pet of the week:
Westman

"How has Westman not been scooped up yet?" That's what one of the volunteers at Long Beach Animal Care Services said of this floppy-eared goofball after a cuddly session with the big love bug! Westman is just over a year old. He loves car rides, especially if an In-N-Out doggie burger is in the offing, playing with toys (Note: He does not like to share them!) and cuddling. As you can see, he loves the shelter benches and taking up the entire seating space. Westman has been at the shelter far too long, and he needs to go home. Long Beach Animal Care Services is over capacity with dogs, so speed the process to adopt or foster Westman or any of our other pets by emailing PetAdopt@longbeach.gov or petfoster@longbeach.gov. You can also call (562) 570-4925. Our shelter hours are Wednesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 7700 E. Spring St. at the entrance to El Dorado Park (no parking fee for shelter visitors). Ask for ID#A722537.
