When asked what he is going to do about the sex-based complaints, Long Beach Yacht Club General Manager Norm Rich talks about how he wants everyone to feel welcome and he respects what the picketers are saying during the May 7, 2026 rally.

Two women file harassment claims against LB Yacht Club

Samantha Diaz
Managing Editor

Two women have filed complaints with the California Civil Rights Department, alleging they faced sex-based harassment while working at the Long Beach Yacht Club over the last three years.

The two women, Julianne Perez and Vanessa Wainer, allege they experienced verbal abuse, intimidation and harassment from the club's executive chef, Ken Haselwood, whom they say specifically targeted pregnant women. In their complaints, they say they raised their concerns with the club's human resources department and the Long Beach Yacht Club General Manager Norm Rich multiple times over the last three years and their concerns were never addressed.

The complaints to the California Civil Rights Department were filed on April 20. Then on May 7, Unite Here Local 11 organized a rally outside of the Yacht Club in support of Perez and Wainer, calling for the "fair and humane treatment of women and pregnant workers." Unite Here Local 11 is a labor union that represents over 32,000 hospitality workers in Southern California.

Perez began working at the Long Beach Yacht Club in 2022 as a chef. Perez called herself "the tool" in the kitchen, since she would often help everyone out any way she could. She said when Haselwood began working as the executive chef in late 2022, he was "quiet, observant, friendly and welcoming." However,

ELECTION

Incumbents have strong showing in Long Beach primaries

As of Thursday, June 4 at 5:30 p.m., all but one of the Long Beach races are being led by an incumbent candidate.

Richard H. Grant | Signal Tribune

An election worker hands an "I Voted" sticker to a voter after turning in their ballot at the Signal Hill Community Center voting center on Nov. 7, 2022.

There is scant change in the air this election season as incumbent candidates hold strong in the June 2 primary election. From mayor and city auditor to city council and school board members, residents may see the same faces representing them for another four years.

A candidate only needs more than 50% of the votes in their race to win outright and avoid a general election in November. With incumbent Mary Zendejas hovering just above 50% in the District 1 race and the close showdown between incumbent Megan Kerr and challenger Tara Riggi for the District 5 councilmember seat, those two races are the ones to watch closely in Long Beach.

Votes are still being counted, with the Associated Press estimating 66% of the votes for the Long Beach mayoral race have been tallied at the time of publication. It will be weeks before every vote is counted. However, for some races with results already highly skewed in one direction, that may not matter.

As of June 4, the Los Angeles County Registrar estimates 25% of LA County residents voted in the election.

At 4:54 p.m. on Thursday, June 4, the Associated Press called the mayoral race for Rex Richardson.

The Long Beach election results as of 5:30 p.m. on Thursday, June 4 are as follows:

Long Beach Coast second baseman Jacob Jablonski celebrates with his team after hitting his fifth home run of the season on June 2, 2026.

LB Coast puts on a winning welcome in inaugural home opener

Samantha Diaz
Managing Editor

Facing a 3-2 count in the bottom of the second inning, Long Beach Coast slugger Thomas McCaffrey got the party started on opening night at Blair Field with one massive crack of the bat.

McCaffrey's homer kicked off an offensive onslaught which ended with the Coast routing the RedPocket Mobiles (1-12) on their first-ever home game 13-4. Anchored by an impressive night from offensive powerhouse Jacob Jablonski, who ended the night with 3 hits, 3 runners brought in and a home run of his own, Long Beach's newest team certainly made an entrance in their homecoming.

"I put this team together knowing that this was the type of team it would be, and they are living up to expectations," said manager Troy Percival after the game, adding that Jablonski has been the "centerpoint" of the clubhouse.

As if they needed more reason for celebration, the Coast (10-3) are tied for first in the Pioneer League and on a seven-game win streak. Growing pains be damned.

The sold-out crowd on Tuesday, wearing both teal LBC and black and white Regulators merch, welcomed the Coast with boisterous cheers and chants interrupted only by the sounds of classic Warren G, Tupac and Snoop Dogg songs. Families, college students and local celebrities like Marilyn Bohl and he quickly began making changes as Perez claims Haselwood told the staff to stop talking while working and would not allow them to play Mexican music, allegedly saying, "We're not a Mexican restaurant. We can't be playing Mexican music here."

Samuel Chacko | Signal Tribune
Maria Meza, Unite Here Local 11 lead organizer, uses a megaphone to chant "no justice, no peace" outside of the Long Beach Yacht Club on May 7, 2026.

Perez alleges that Haselwood would get in his workers' faces "to physically intimidate them ... mostly to female employees" and would make comments about women faking whenever they called out sick.

When Perez became pregnant in January 2023, she claims Haselwood's demeanor toward her shifted drastically. Due to her pregnancy, Perez says she would need help from her coworkers to lift heavy kitchen equipment and wasn't as quick as before. In her complaint, Perez alleges that Haselwood began making "degrading comments," as well as "puffing up and getting close to my face" to intimidate her.

During this time, Perez allegedly discovered Haselwood was timing her bathroom breaks, but no one else's. She claims he would also "scold" her if she took too long.

"He would time me so often that I found myself holding in my urge to go to the restroom, and even urinate myself at times, just to avoid his discipline," Perez wrote in her complaint to the California Civil Rights Department.

Around this time, in 2024, Wainer claims she found Perez crying in the bathroom stalls at work. Wainer wrote in her complaint that afterwards, she allegedly confronted Haselwood about his behavior toward Perez and asked him if he had been timing Perez's bathroom breaks. He allegedly admitted that he was reviewing the Yacht Club's cameras to time how long Perez was spending in the bathroom.

"To my knowledge, [redacted] only timed and surveilled Julie [Perez] in this manner," Wainer wrote in her complaint. She also claims that on a separate occasion, Haselwood questioned what Perez was doing in the bathroom in front of multiple other employees.

Wainer also claims that Haselwood continued to harass Perez even while she was on maternity leave in 2024, allegedly mocking her to their coworkers after Perez requested an extended leave due to postpartum depression.

Perez told the Signal Tribune she went to the Long Beach Yacht Club's human resources department "several times." "They would write things down and say, 'We'll talk to him,'" Perez said, adding that nothing ever came from these complaints.

"I also know that I am not the only woman who has suffered from [redacted's] behavior, and overall, there is a pervasive culture of fear at the Yacht Club that has made it challenging for me to speak up," Perez wrote in her complaint.

As of the time of publication, Haselwood is still listed as Executive Chef on the Long Beach Yacht Club's website.

The two women, Julianne Perez and Vanessa Wainer, allege they experienced verbal abuse, intimidation and harassment from the club's executive chef, Ken Haselwood, whom they say specifically targeted pregnant women.

Wainer alleges she had also witnessed Haselwood speak about women in degrading and discriminatory ways throughout her time of employment at the Yacht Club as a housekeeping manager, from 2023 to 2025. When Wainer mentioned her plans to get married, she claims Haselwood told her that he "hates women" and "viewed all women as money hungry liars because his wife cheated on him." Wainer wrote that she tried to avoid Haselwood at work afterwards.

Wainer claims Haselwood's treatment toward her also got worse when she got pregnant in 2024. On multiple occasions, she alleges Haselwood called pregnant women "lazy," while she herself worked up to two weeks before going into labor to help the club during its busy season.

On the first day Wainer returned from her maternity leave in March 2025, she claims Haselwood began yelling at her while she was on lunch break. Multiple coworkers checked in on her afterwards, and her husband drove to the Yacht Club to check on her well-being, the complaint alleges.

When she went to the human resources department about the incident, she claims they told her, "Oh my god that guy has anger management issues. He is going to get us in trouble." It's unclear if Haselwood received any disciplinary action afterwards, though Wainer alleges the club's general manager told her to be patient with him.

Wainer resigned in October 2025 and wrote in her complaint that Haselwood "created an atmosphere that made working at the Yacht Club a miserable and stressful experience."

When Perez got pregnant a second time in 2025, she claims she became so stressed at work she began experiencing "anxiety attacks, stomach pains and nightmares." She alleges that Haselwood screamed and slammed a tray down in the kitchen after finding out that Perez was ordered by her doctor to only work in four-hour shifts after being diagnosed with pregnancy-induced carpal tunnel.

She also claims Haselwood con-

Isabel Brentner, with the Hyatt Regency Long Beach, pickets outside of the Long Beach Yacht Club on May 7, 2026.

Shortly after these incidents, Perez wrote that she was crying in the bathroom when the director of member services allegedly suggested she start her maternity leave early, meaning Perez would lose two months of income.

Perez is currently on maternity leave with her second child. She told the Signal Tribune that she's scared, nervous to return to work and fearful of retaliation.

"I do not want anyone else at the Yacht Club, especially other women and expecting mothers, to experience what I've been through," Perez wrote in her complaint.

The two women are requesting that the California Civil Rights Department investigate the Yacht Club's "failure to correct and prevent sexual harassment, and its failure to foster a safe work environment where everyone is treated with respect."

The Signal Tribune requested a response from the Long Beach Yacht Club about the two complaints filed and did not hear back by the time of publication.

COAST HOME OPENER

Samuel Chacko | Signal Tribune

Prior to the Long Beach Coast's home opener on June 2, 2026, fans lined up to snap themed photo ops, find their seats and receive autographs from several Coast players.

Mayor Rex Richardson all seemed to revel in one fact: pro baseball has returned to Long Beach.

"You could feel it in your bones," Jablonski said of his first home game. "It was juiced, and any little thing you did, it was just the roar of the crowd, so we're living the dream and it's just a blast ... You can't ask for anything better."

Right-hander Brett Wozniak took the mound to start for the Coast, striking out one batter and catching a runner trying to steal in the first inning. He ended the night with 4 strikeouts and 4 runs given up across five innings. Relief pitchers Julien Hernandez and Cole Cressend also saw playing time, earning 5 and 1 strikeouts, respectively.

The Mobiles were the first to score, but McCaffrey's homer in the bottom of the second galvanized the Coast's offense. After getting on the board, they loaded the bases with walks from Jablonski and Matthew Bardowell, followed by a Patrick Roche single.

Eddy Pelc and Anthony Mata both took advantage of a defensive lapse from the Mobiles, sending balls soaring into a gap in the outfield for back-to-back doubles and bringing runners home. The Coast ended the second inning up 5-1, and were just beginning their impressive performance.

When the Mobiles scored a run to start the third inning, Jablonski was quick to respond with a home run of his own, bringing McCaffrey home from first base and putting the Coast up 7-2 to start the fourth.

"We've just been going crazy as a team," Jablonski said. "If it's not me, if it's another guy ... just going down the line. I think that's what makes a really good team, you know?"

The Coast's defense was quick to stifle any attempts at a comeback throughout the night. A diving catch by Jablonski behind the foul line in the fourth inning was one of the loudest moments of the night, and players responded to pop flies and line drives with the ease of a team who had much more experience together than the 13 games they've played.

Perhaps this poise is the reason why Percival said after the game that it's his favorite team he's ever coached.

"First of all, they're very talented, but they play together as a team," he said. "Nobody gets on anybody. They make mistakes, they know it's going to happen and they grind. I mean, if we're down six, up eight, whatever, they just grind out every play, every at bat. I haven't had to do a whole lot, to be honest."

The home crowd was confident in the team's abilities as well, with many fans trusting the ballooning lead and leaving the game early, despite its historical significance. The half that remained stayed well after the game, reveling in the win and a new reason to rep their city.

The Long Beach Coast will continue its homestand against the Mobiles through June 7, followed by another home series against the Modesto Roadsters from June 9-14.

Belmont Plaza Pool breaks ground, expected to finish construction by 2028

Samuel Chacko | Signal Tribune

Long Beach residents, athletes, city officials and their families commemorate the groundbreaking of the Belmont Plaza Pool on May 30, 2026.

After almost a decade of planning meetings, constant redesigns and a multi-year lawsuit, the City of Long Beach officially broke ground Saturday morning to rebuild the Belmont Plaza Pool.

The Belmont Plaza Pool was closed in 2013 and demolished the following year because it was classified as “structurally and seismically unsafe.”

The new 50-meter pool and 544-seat aquatics complex will cost the City of Long Beach $105 million to build. To fund the project, Long Beach introduced parking meter fees along the coast in 1,800 spots.

The Belmont Plaza Pool project is expected to be completed in the spring of 2028, just as the Olympics come to Long Beach, when it will host 11 events.

“We certainly recognize our past [and] are building this venue for the future,” Long Beach Mayor Rex Richardson said in his opening statement at the groundbreaking. “We want this moment in 2028 to be a moment where young people are inspired to go out to their parks, go out to their basketball courts, walk to the pools and really be inspired and become future Olympians, future athletes.”

The Belmont Pool project will host swimming programs, diving meets and professional water polo — bringing a space for both competitive and recreational swimming.

Long Beach swimmers and water polo players of all ages — from Olympic-level athletes to CIF record-holders — spoke to the Long Beach community Saturday about the impact swimming has made on them.

“At this pool, and certainly at the former pool, I was able to participate in the first CIF swim meet for high school in 1969,” John McMullen said, with his grandkids at his side.

“The pool is a gathering place where everybody can participate,” McMullen said. “When people walk into that gate and swim and walk out, they’re feeling better, they’re happy with themselves ... I think it’s so important for our community to carry this legacy [of aquatics] through.”

Two Long Beach Olympians, Ryder Dodd and Jessica Hardy, spoke about childhood memories they had in pools and the role Long Beach pools had in their life.

“I’m proud to say that I’m from Long Beach and that Belmont is my home pool because you can’t beat this location, you can’t beat this community support,” Hardy, an Olympic gold and bronze medalist, said.

“I have two young kids, six and eight, and they’re the future. You guys are building for the next generation and to continue the legacy for Long Beach,” Hardy said as she began tearing up. “I can’t wait to cheer them on, can’t wait to celebrate and swim in the pool.”

Less Smalz, a 61-year-old born and raised Long Beach resident, grew up swimming in the 1970s.

“[My older brother and I] would take the Long Beach transit down here for a quarter and they would let us swim for 50 cents,” Smalz reminisced. “They had the low dive and high dive and the cement platform diving and this was something special just for us to go down here as youth, and now we want the next generation to experience the good things in life.”

Samuel Chacko | Signal Tribune

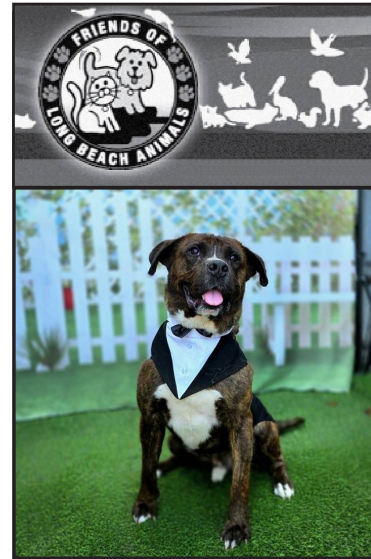

Long Beach residents, athletes and City officials look at renderings of the Belmont Plaza Pool, which is set to open in 2028, on May 30, 2026.

Smalz said bringing back the Belmont Plaza Pool will bring the swim vibe to Long Beach, mentioning the explosive effect aquatics can have on the next generation.

“Long Beach is getting ready to have a revival when it comes to the water and the ocean and events like swimming....we’re going to have all kinds of competition going on [with LA 28] and it’s going to be amazing. The kids are going to love it, and everybody is going to jump on board,” he said. “This is going to be summertime in the LBC all year long.”

The Belmont Plaza Pool project is expected to be completed in the spring of 2028, just as the Olympics come to Long Beach, when it will host 11 events.

Pet of the week: Rosco

Rosco as you can see, is quite fond of stepping out on the town! Here he is, dressed to impress for a formal, leash-required gala. Just last week, he was volunteer Cheryl’s date at the Long Beach’s Favorite Pet event at Rec Park. Rosco posed for photos and pets in front of Long Beach Animal Care Services’ Adoption Waggin’ hoping that he’d get the chance to be someone’s favorite pet forever and ever. Rosco is a 3-year-old Akita-mastiff mix who’s as handsome as he is good-natured. He’s meant to be loved and cuddled in a home. How about yours?

Long Beach Animal Care Services is over capacity with dogs, so speed the process to adopt or foster Roscoe or any of our other pets by emailing PetAdopt@longbeach.gov or petfoster@longbeach.gov. You can also call (562) 570-4925. Our shelter hours are Wednesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 7700 E.
